

Evidence that the problem is REAL

Users must purchase each deal item separately

Evidence that the problem is REAL

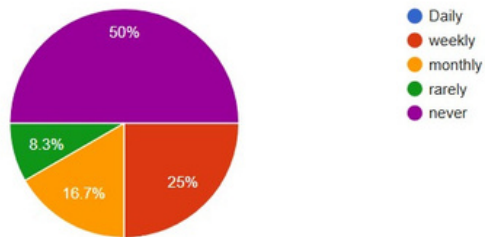

Leads to user fatigue and low repeat purchase

Evidence that the problem is REAL

How often do you currently purchase items from the "Deal of the Day" section in the CRED Store?

Copy chart

12 responses

When purchasing multiple "Deal of the Day" items, how cumbersome do you find the current process of checking out each item separately?

Copy chart

12 responses

How much does the need to repeatedly enter your address and payment details deter you from purchasing multiple "Deal of the Day" items?

Copy chart

12 responses

Have you ever decided not to purchase an additional "Deal of the Day" item because of the checkout process?

Copy chart

12 responses

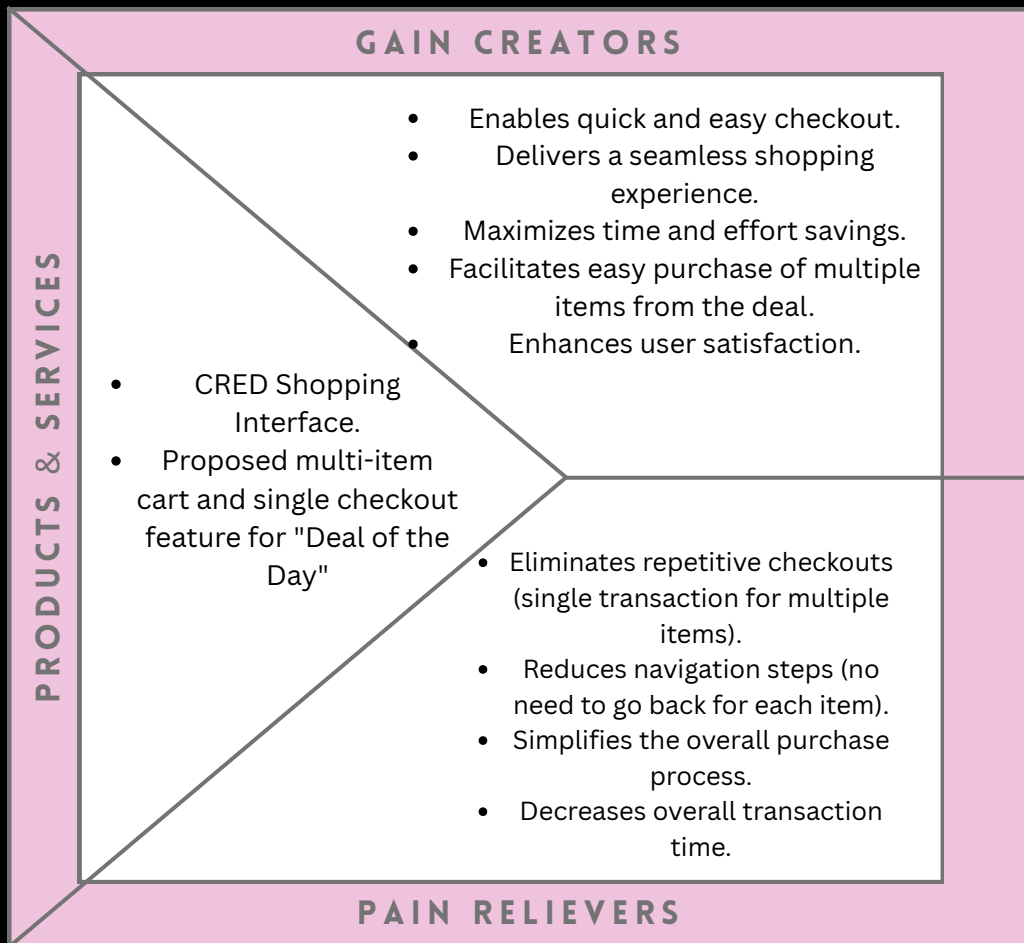

Proposed Solution

Implement a streamlined shopping experience that allows users to add multiple unlocked 'Deal of the Day' items to a single cart for a unified, one-time checkout.

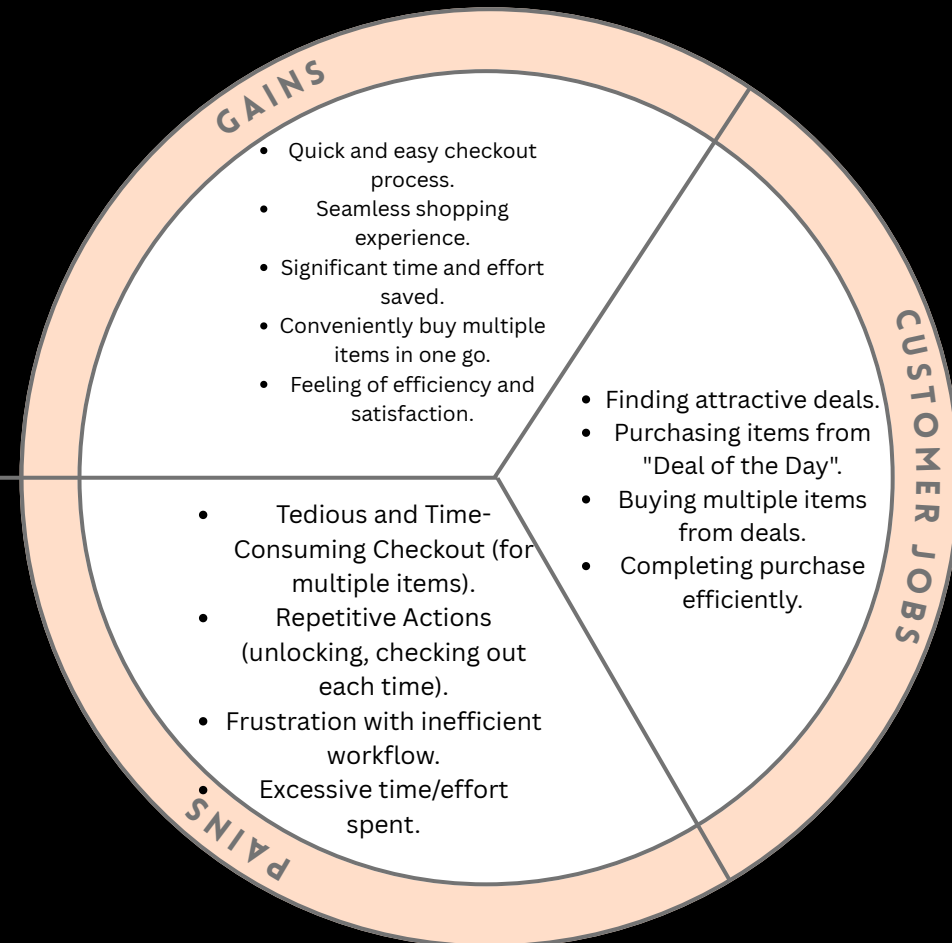

Suggested UI Flow

1. Add to Cart → 2. View Cart → 3. Checkout

VALUE PROPOSITION CANVAS

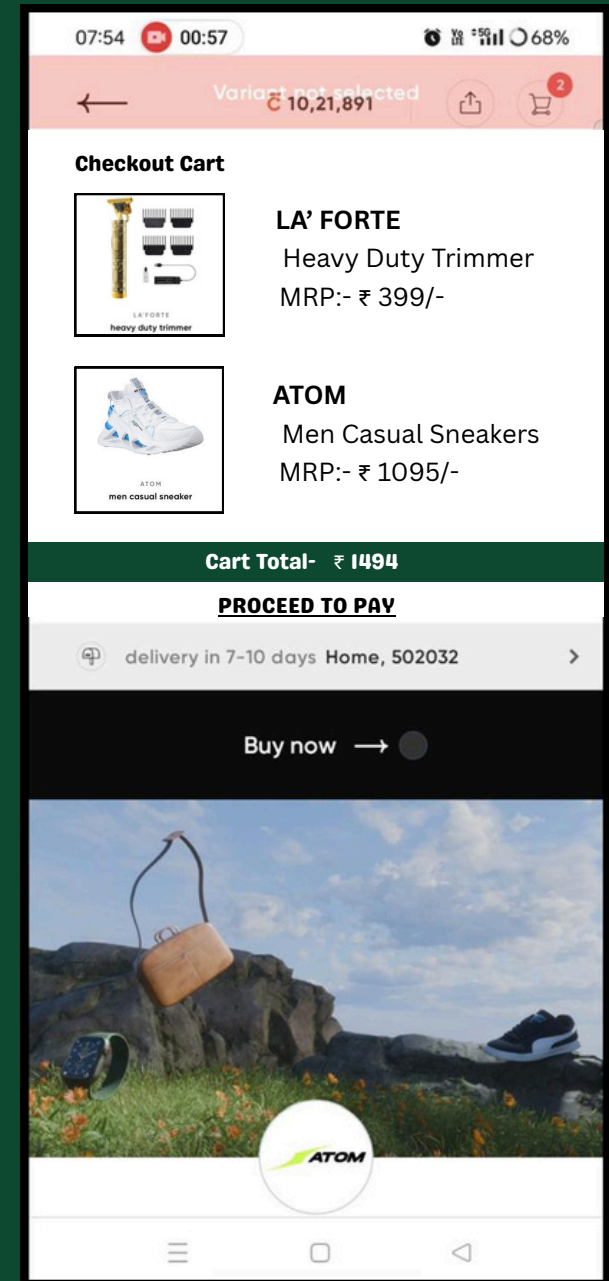

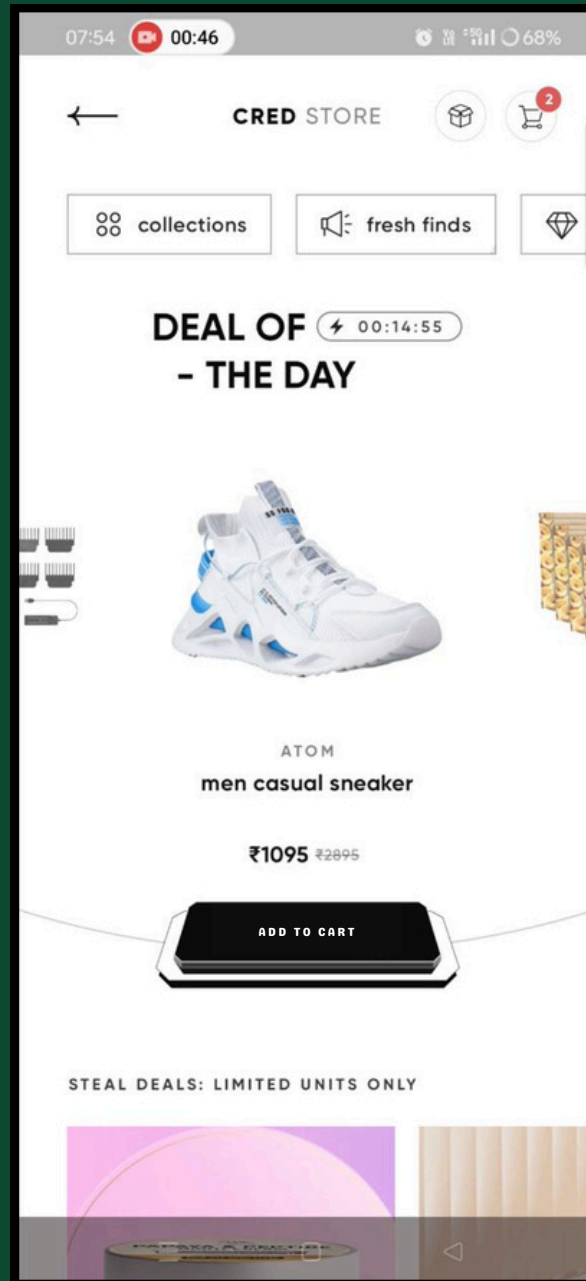

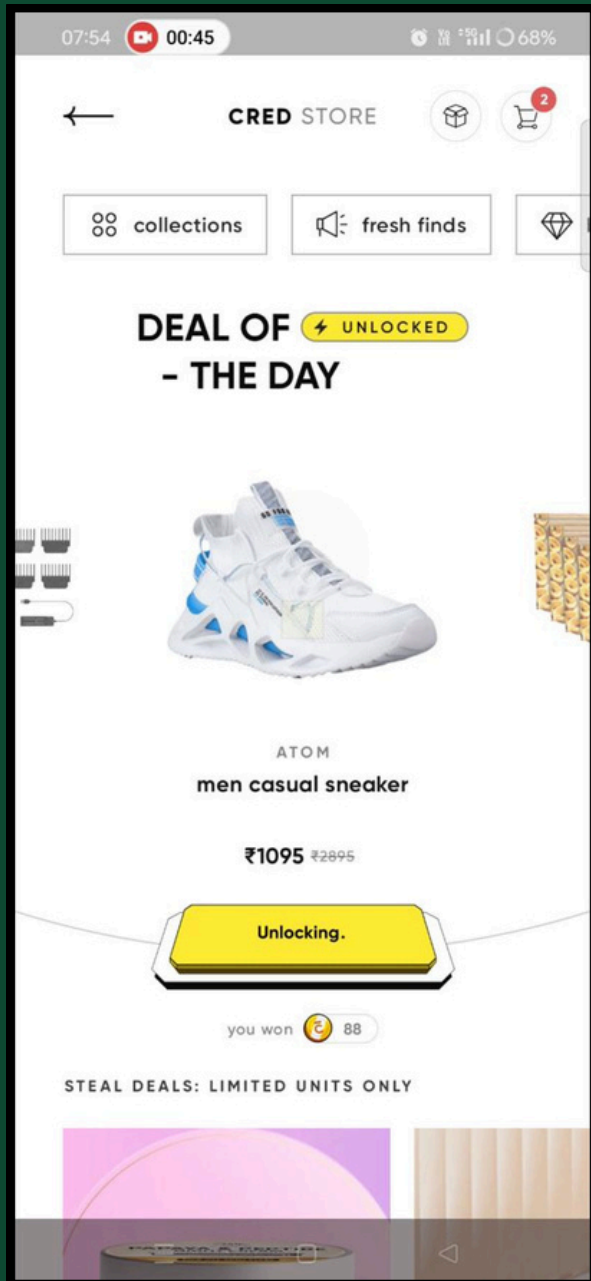

VALUE PROPOSITION

CUSTOMER SEGMENTS

Proposed Solution

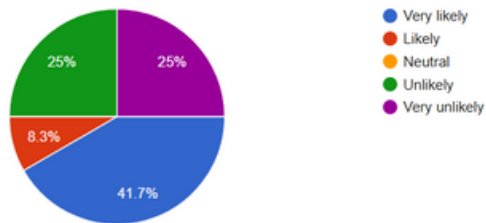

Problem Solution Fit Test

How likely would you be to use a shopping cart feature that allows you to add multiple "Deal of the Day" items and check out at once?

 Copy chart

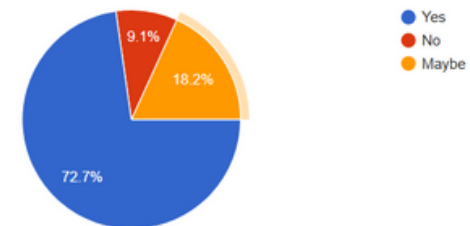

12 responses

Do you believe that a single checkout process for multiple "Deal of the Day" items would improve your shopping experience on CRED?

 Copy chart

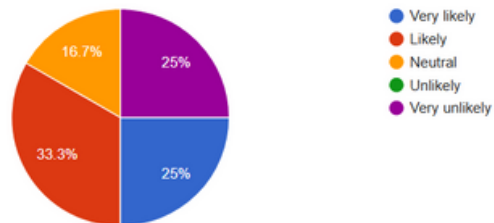

11 responses

If a shopping cart feature were implemented, how likely would you be to purchase more than one "Deal of the Day" item in a single transaction?

 Copy chart

12 responses

What are the biggest frustrations you currently face when purchasing items from the "Deal of the Day" section?

4 responses

None

Selecting multiple items one by one

The price sometime is higher then amazon or flipkart

The item is not the same what is promised.